

Give us a chance....

I love these projects, because it just shows you that even though there are a lot of bad people in the world, there are still plenty that have a good heart. This is my second project that I have participated in and it still surprises me how close I end up getting with all of you. I find it funny how at the first day all of us are strangers to each other but then at the end of the project you can say we are the best of friends. It is such a wonderful feeling to know that we have friends out there. So with this being said I think that is why we must be given a chance. A chance to show that we young people can work together. All of us came from different countries, different experiences, different cultures and we worked together. We have put our minds together and had a good conversation about different situations in the world. So in my eyes that is such a wonderful thing, because it proves that no matter our differences we can still work together. We are the future of this world, of course we would still need guidance because we still have a long way to go. But if you as adults let our voices be heard then you will see that we have what it takes. Maybe in your adult's eyes, you guys won't see a difference that quick, but I know for sure for us young people, the littlest steps mean the world to us. This project inspired a lot of us, it has put us to stand still and realize how good we are, especially us from Curaçao. Us sharing personal experiences have inspired me and opened my eyes to be better. To stand for what I believe in. Here on the island we don't have such a big voice, but we are still going to raise it, cause after all we are the future. So that is why I hope this project had inspired all of us to be better. For us all to stand together and be the best person we can be. We have to fight for what is right. There will probably be a lot of rocks in our way, but we have to keep going because we are strong and we would be stronger if we do it together. That's why we have to stand up and inspire others with our minds and ambitions. If you have a dream to make this world a better place, do not ever stop believing in yourself, because if you don't believe in yourself who else will....?
